CASE OIG-I-2014-516

An Amtrak machinist ordered goods from Amtrak's Work Management System that he did not need to fulfill his job duties. When confronted, the machinist admitted to ordering goods that he took home for personal use, gave away or sold. A consensual search, agreed to by the employee, resulted in the recovery of $1,400 in Amtrak equipment. He was arrested and charged with felony theft in Cook County, Illinois. The employee pled guilty on November 19, 2014, and was sentenced to one year supervised probation. He was ordered to make restitution in the amount of $5,000 to Amtrak. The employee voluntarily resigned.
